J, the Gingerly Wizard, will be having the cheese plate, please. This charming British pub seems like a great place to recharge my mystical resources. It reminds me of the bar near my old wizard school, a wizard school that must not be named for obvious reasons. I wouldn't want word getting back to Charles that I'm in town. Not only am I here to destroy him, but I also didn't pay to attend our 100-year-reunion. Charles was our class treasurer and such a pincher!

This ale is increasing my wizardly charisma! Hello, yes, I am on a quest! I, the Gingerly Wizard, have journeyed far to this land. I seek the Wraith, a once-great adept—much like myself. We even went to magic school together. Now it is my duty to destroy him with all my wizardly powers. But first I must seek his whereabouts here with all these charming witches. Perhaps some of them have seen Charles the Wraith? I'll have to be thorough and quiz them all.

What a colorful shoppe! The Gingerly Wizard is pleased. These bright shelves provide me with rare histories of other wizards and wraiths. I've found entire quarterlies devoted to the quests of conjurers like myself. This is exactly what I require as I home in on my opponent. Charles must sense our confrontation is near at hand, as all word of him has vanished! He cowers in his evil, miserly wizard corner, but I will smoke him out. For now it's time to ready my plan!

Charles, you poor fool, I've found you! In a rose park.
Did you make yourself a mixtape for the occasion?
Remember that mixtape you made me with songs that had the words "gingerly wizard"? I still have it!
You were the best mixtape wizard in our whole magic school, Charles! Why did you choose darkness?
What's that? I'm harshing your mellow? Things are about to get harsher, my friend. Renounce the forces of night or remain locked here in lightning for eternity!
